Fatury, and effective firs—in one of which the patent may expire. Who can say that these excesses are not often followed by those dreadful diseases—insanity and consumption? The records of the insanity and the melancholy deaths by consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of these assertions. In Lunatic asylums the most melancholly exhibition appears. The countenance is actually sodden and almost destitute—neither mirth or grief ever visits it. Should a sound of a voice occur, it is rarely articulate. rarely articulate.

THE FRIGATE NIAGARA IN ENGLAND. The London Times thus speak of our magnificent Steamfrigate Niagara, lying in the Thames below London. She is vast as an ark, with a peculiar defiant air, and an expression which tells you at once that she was made for other than the peaceful purposes of commerce, though nothing in the way of armament, or even in the trim of yard, denotes the man-of-war. This ship, along whose decks a crowd of fashionable visitors daily and hourly stream, and all round which lie a fleet of shore boats 'masters of the situation," making as much of it as if the President himself was on view is the far-famed frigate Niagara. She is, we believe, the first States' frigate that has ever anchored off Gravesend. Let our readers, therefore, or at least such of them as love to gaze upon noble specimens of naval architecture, avail themselves of the unusual opportunity. Such an one will not soon again present itself, for in size, form, speed and intended weight of armament, the Niagara is, beyond doubt, the first man-of-war of her class in the world. As the visitor approaches her lofty sides, he is struck with the easy graceful manner in which she "sits" the water, with her bows welup, slowly rising, and showing of her vantage. But beyond this feature the ed by a single streak of white, gives a heavy appearance quits foreign to her shape. She is also very hollow in the waist, which imparts that wall-sided aspect so characteristic of the American iners, but which their fine frigates, except in this instance, having managed to avoid can run, it is said, from 16 to 17 knots an by no means imposing. The bulwarks

ANT!-A case was decided on Wednesday last, by the Court of Appeals at Frankfort, Ky., which settles the question as to when a man who is attacked in the State of Kentucky is justified in killing his assailant. The case was from Grayson Circuit, in which Meredith had been convicted of manslaughter for the killing of one Ireland who attacked him, and the lower court charged the jury, "If Ireland assaulted the defendant and he had reasonable grounds to believe he was in danger of sustaining bodily harm, or the loss of life from such assault, and if necessary, to protect his life or person from great bodily harm, he might kill Ireland, if he had no safe means of escaping. But if the defendant could have safely retreated from the danger and by Ireland."

This higher court however decided that this charge was wrong. That the jury had nothing to do with the question wether "the defendant could have safely retreated", that being a question to be settled by the judgment of the defendant himself. "In the exercise of this judgment he must act rationally. Whether an actual necessity to kill existed or not was a question to be decided by Meredith at the time. Though he may have erred in his judgment-though he 'could have safely retreated', yet if he acted in good faith, and had reasonable grounds to beheve that his only safety was to kill his antagonist, the law excuses him."

tragedy was enacted at the Fort Madison levee this morning. The steamer Saraclaid at the levee until near 12 o'clock - At about 11 o'clock some misunderstanding which place he was followed by the Capdeck. Rev. J. P. Teter, of the M. E. Church, in this place, was an eye witness the termination of the tragedy. He informs me that the mate stood by while the negro was being stripped and tied, brandishing a huge bowie knife about his head and threatining to kill him instantly. Another colored servant declared that the victim was a free man, and called for an officer to protect him, but was soo silenced by the brandishing of a bowie knife about his throat by a deck hand. A large crowd of citizens had collected postulated with the officers and urged that if the negro was guilty of any crime that he should be handed over to the proper authorities and dealt with according to the law. The captain retorted by calling them "damned nigger thieves", presented a revolver and threatened to fire into the crowd. A man who was preparing to flog the negro declared that he was his slave and that he had a right to do with him as he pleased. At this point some citizens evinced a disposition to prevent further outrage, but were driven from the boat. Stones were then thrown from the shore, and the fir ing commenced from the boat. The excitement became intense and there was a general rush for firearms. From fifty to one hundred shots were fired. Thus far I give the statement of Rev. M. Teter, which I find is corroborated by other eye

The firing was kept up from the steam-er after she left the levee and after it had ceased from the shore. A malicious coolness and recklessness was exhibited by the officers and crew of the boat. It was evident that they intended to kill as many as possible, as their shots were directed to groups of citizens who had taken no part in the trouble. The citizens of Fort Madison will have a legal investigation of the affray.

In fact, many of our frigates, less than half her size, and to be compared to her in any warlike or seagoing quality, seem larger on the deck. Not till the visitor has walked forward and perched himself somewhere near the bowsprit, can he fully appreciate her immense size and beautiful form, and feel that he is looking down on such a war steamer as the 'world has not yet seen the equal of, and by the side of which the English navy can show nothing to compete.
